Radical Thinking

You gotta admit, Barry Levine is a radical thinker when it comes to comics publishing. Rather than starting with a shoestring budget, launching with minimal promotion, and calling on lesser-known creative talent, he's taking a more radical approach.

Levine knows that launching a publishing imprint requires investment—and it requires talented creators to generate excitement about the new line. That's why Radical has invested in such creators as Dave Elliott, Steve Niles, Ian Edginton, Yoshitaka Amano, Luis Royo, Jim Steranko, John Bolton, Clayton Crain, Steve Moore, and Bill Sienkiewicz, to name a few.

While Levine's first comics will appear this spring, his company's roots go back more quite a while. Levine, who worked with Dark Horse for three years, decided that he wanted to put his efforts into building his own company rather than working for someone else's. "In September 2006, we decided to focus on building an infrastructure," Levine said. "We really didn't have any product, just various concepts that were works in progress. We also decided that we were not going to be a company that rushed to get their books out that weren't ready, creatively or editorially. So last year, at Comic-Con 2007, we debuted the quality of our Radical brand as well as our concepts and announced a lot of the writers and artists that we were going to work with in 2008."

What is Levine's background? "Initially, photographing some of the biggest groups in the music industry allowed me to segue into music and films," Levine said. So how did that lead him to comics? "Many musicians I had been working with were overlapping into other areas such as films, which allowed me the opportunity to begin my careers in film and music production as well as music supervision. Ultimately, this same creative mentality and understanding has brought me to my love for comics and appreciating all of the collective artistic aspects that go in to breathing life into the pages.

While Levine is the mastermind behind Radical, he is assisted by co-publisher and editor-in-chief Dave Elliott, a longtime comics veteran. Levine explained how the two of them became partners. "I've known Dave for over twelve years, and we wanted to form a company almost ten years ago—but neither of us was really ready at the time. When I was looking for an Editor-in-Chief, my first obvious thought was Dave. He loved what we were doing and jumped on board. We're a very democratic company. We create collectively from an editorial point of view and Dave has been invaluable."

Levine knows what he wants Radical to be known for—and when. "We want to be known at Comic-Con this year," Levine said. "Why wait a year or two years? I would like us to be known not as a niche player, but as a publisher who takes the time and the commitment to display great designs, posters, covers, interiors and stories that will appeal to a larger audience based on a high concept.

"We try to create real as well as mythological characters. We are not going to focus just on horror, sci-fi, fantasy, etc. So how do we accomplish that? We develop stories that transcend one genre—but they can also contain underlying genre elements. It's our job to work with the writers and make sure that we have created believable mythologies for each of our stories and characters. Most importantly, we bring our creators' stories to life in the pages we publish."

Will Levine be involved with Radical on a creative level? "Absolutely, I'm involved with every artist, writer and panel for every project. On a day-to-day basis, I'm working close with the writer and the artists on art directing sequential art, covers and production art."

Radical isn't a single-facet publisher; instead, the imprint will comprise multiple brands targeted at different audiences. What led to that approach, and what brands does Levine envision? "The reason behind individual brands is to platform and identify each concept pertaining to its theme and artwork. Radical Art in the imprint we will be building by publishing works of art from some of the top creators of the world; these are primarily coffee-table books that will cross over from our targeted audience. Radical Comics is our label that is focused on the retail market, Radical Books will be published as oversized, hardcover, graphic novels for the retail and mass-market target audience. Radical Manga is basically an imprint of Imaginary Friends Studios in Singapore. These book are the art and stories created in Asia for Asia that will be given the opportunity to be marketed in North America and Europe."

Levine offered a rundown on the company's initial offerings. While Hercules may appear to be a rather traditional mythological series, "it's far from traditional," according to Levine. "Think more in the vein of Braveheart meets 300. Steve Moore had a lot to do in creating a gritty and real persona of Hercules and his physical and mental journey that takes place after the Twelve Labors."

How did Levine enlist comics legend Jim Steranko to supply painted covers for Hercules? "I had Dave Elliott do a lot of pleading and crying, since he has an excellent relationship with Jim," Levine joked. "He approached him with the project in January 2006, the same time he approached Steve Moore. Jim loved the high concept and the non-traditional way we approached this iconic figure and his character. We hope to have Jim working with Steve Moore on another comics series as well; we'll make our announcement about this next series—and additional talents who'll be involved—at San Diego Comic-Con this year."

The second May launch, Caliber, "is written by Sam Sarkar, who heads development at Johnny Depp's production company, Infinitum Nihil. It's the Arthurian Legend told in the American Northwest as The Wild Bunch. The fabled sword Excalibur is exemplified as the mystic gun Caliber, which fires lightning-fast and never misses. Sam brought this to me when I was at Dark Horse; for one reason or another, it didn't work out there. Lucky for us, it was brought it to Radical when we made our debut. Sam is a long-time comics fan and a talented screenwriter who will be writing the screenplay for the film adaptation that John Woo is attached to direct.

"Garrie Gastonny of Imaginary Friends Studios is in charge of creating our gorgeous, fully painted, interiors for Caliber, while the covers will be produced by Stanley 'Artgerm' Lau of Imaginary Friends Studios, Luis Royo, Dave Wilkins, and Tomm Coker, to name a few."

Next up is "Mateki: The Magic Flute, Yoshitaka Amano's unique interpretation of Mozart's The Magic Flute; this is a beautifully expressive work of art. This book follows Amano's great successes such as Vampire Hunter D, Final Fantasy, and Neil Gaiman's Sandman: The Dream Hunters. We're proud and excited to be working with an artist of such talent; the book will debut in June this year.

"Freedom Formula is an original concept from Imaginary Friends Studios, set in a world in which corporations rule the city-states and the leading form of entertainment is a type of racing in which competitors wear extreme, high-speed racing exosuits. It's a story of a bloodline bred to compete in this dangerous sport, and a young man destined to bring hope back to an oppressed society dominated by corporations' laws. This comic is written by Edmund Shern of Imaginary Friends Studios and illustrated with unique, stylized painted interior work by Chester Ocampo, Freedom Formula features cover art by Kai of Imaginary Friends Studios, Stephan Martiniere and others. We want to have it ready by San Diego Comic Con.

"City of Dust is an original Steve Niles' set in the year 2166 in a world that has collapsed due to religious warfare; a new society has been rebuilt on top of the ruins of old. There is no religion, no fairy tales, no science fiction, no horror or anything else imaginative. Imagination is dangerous, and these things have all been made illegal for the safety of all human beings; anyone caught violating this ban will be executed. Phillip Khrome, a troubled police officer investigating a spree of murders, soon discovers that many ancient secrets lurk in the shadows, and forgotten terrors from the past are creeping around every corner. The painted interior art is done by Zid of Imaginary Friends Studios, with additional cover art by talents such as Scott Hampton, George Pratt, Greg Ruth, Kent Williams, and others. The 44-page first issue will be released in September ."

How many books does Levine plan to publish on a monthly basis, and who'll be working on which projects? "We plan to publish two comics in May: Hercules and Caliber. Each will be on sale for only $1. We'll add one new title in August, Freedom Formula. September brings City of Dust; in October, we have Aladdin. That's followed by our hardcover trades for Hercules and Caliber in December.

"In 2009, we will expand our slate of projects to include two or three books a month under our various imprints. Those books will include projects from many respected industry talents. Ian Edginton will be working on Oblivion with director Joe Kosinski. Hotwire is a concept that co-created by Warren Ellis & Steve Pugh, with the comic being written and drawn by Steve Pugh. Steve Niles is working on another currently untitled project, which will be his second for the company; and we have Assassins: Sword of the Apocalypse with well-known interactive industry creative writing talent and project creator Flint Dille. And there are others still yet to be announced.

Launching a line with top-talent prestige-format $1 books—now that's a really radical approach! "It's part of a very specific marketing strategy that allows people to opportunity to visit our Radical universe, characters, and stories without having to invest a whole lot of money at the beginning of each series," Elliott said. "Basically, we want our first-time readers to not be turned away from a new publisher because we are selling our new comics for the same price as their usual monthly comics. We really are relying on our audience, and we hope that they become fans once they sample the quality art and stories that we pride ourselves on as a company. "

"As for prestige format—our presentation and art will give everybody a good indication of what to expect from Radical Publishing in everything we do."

Hercules #1 and Caliber #1, Radical's premiere offerings, are slated for May release as $1 prestige-format books.
